Adjectives

- Adjectives describe/qualify nouns and nearly always* agree with the noun to which they refer.

- Some adjectives follow a pattern in how they become feminine or plural, others are completely irregular. Revise them.

- The majority of adjectives go after the noun they describe/qualify, but a small group of very common adjectives come before the noun. Some adjectives change their meaning according to whether they come before or after. See F Mich 9.

- * See F Mich 9 to learn about some adjectives that never agree and E Mich 1 to revise where the adjectives that don't agree when used as adverbs.

  - les filles intelligentes la semaine dernière son dernier film un bel acteur un beau monsieur une femme folle
    deux matchs amicaux une serviette sèche elle pèse lourd

Adverbs

- Unlike ADJECTIVES, ADVERBS never agree. Their form never changes. Instead of describing/qualifying things, they describe/qualify VERBS.

- ADJECTIVES ending in a vowel: vrai, absolu – vraiment, absolument
  - add –MENT to the masculine form

- most ADJECTIVES ending in a consonant: lent, heureux – lentement, heureusement
  - add –MENT to the feminine form

- ADJECTIVES ending –ANT/-ENT: constant, évident – constamment, évidemment
  - -remove –ANT/-ENT and replace with –AMMENT/-EMMENT

- IMPORTANT EXCEPTIONS TO MEMORISE:
  - gentil-gentiment bref-brièvement énorme-énormément
  - bon-bien mauvais-mal précis-précisément

- Sometimes in French, adjectives may be used with certain verbs but they have an adverbial meaning. These adjectives never agree, as they behave as if they were adverbs.
  - Cette voiture a coûté très cher. La valise pèse lourd

- ADVERBS never come before subject and the verb as is sometimes the case in English. "I often go to Paris" "~~Je souvent vais à Paris~~". ADVERBS normally go after a CONJUGATED VERB or before an INFINITIVE.

- Some adjectives do not have an adverbial form. They are translated by an adverbial phrase, such as "parler fort" = to speak loudly, in a loud voice.

- See E Mich 1.

Making comparisons

- Simply add a comparative word such as "PLUS" in front of the adjective.
  - plus intéressant moins petit

- The adjective goes in its usual place, and agrees as usual
  - un livre plus intéressant une plus petite fille

- See page 24 of the F pamphlet for a revision of the basics.

- So far you have learned about comparing adjectives. Note also the following points when comparing nouns and infinitives.

- When comparing nouns, the partitive article "du, de la or des" becomes "de", and to say "as many/much as" you use "autant de...que (de)". Definite articles (le, la, les) remain unchanged.

  - Ils ont plus de livres que de DVDs (ils ont DES livres et DES DVDs)
  - Elle a moins d'argent que moi (elle a DE L'argent)
  - Il a autant de CDs que de DVD, mais pas autant d'amis que moi
  - J'aime autant les pommes que les poires.

- When comparing infinitives, if the conjugated verb takes a preposition before the next infinitive, this preposition is repeated before the word "que". If there is no preposition, add "de" before the que:

  - Il pense plus à s'amuser qu'à travailler (penser à faire qc)
  - Nous avons autant besoin de manger que de dormir (avoir besoin de faire qc)
  - Je préfère faire des révisions que d'échouer à mon examen (préférer faire qc)
