Possessives: "my NOUN, your NOUN, mine, yours"

- The most common way of saying that things belong to somebody is to use a POSSESSIVE ADJECTIVE. Like all adjectives (see F Mich 9), they have to agree with what they describe (NOT with the owner). The starred* masc.sing. forms are also used in front of any feminine singular noun starting with a vowel (mon ami, mon amie,)

	masc sing	fem sing	plural
▪	mon*	ma	mes
▪	ton*	ta	tes
▪	son*	sa	ses
▪	notre		notre	nos
▪	votre		votre	vos
▪	leur		leur	leurs

▪ mon frère ma soeur mes parents etc.

- The main thing to remember is to make them agree with what is owned, not the owner. Sometimes this may be ambiguous "son frère" could mean "his brother" or "her brother". Usually, the context makes it clear, but if not, you use "à" plus a DISJUNCTIVE PRONOUN - "son frère à lui" rather than "son frère à elle".

- You may also use the disjunctive pronouns to indicate possession in the following ways:

▪ Ce stylo est à moi/ est à nous / est à eux etc

- The way to ask who something belongs to is to say:

▪ À qui est ….(ce livre/cette cassette) **?
▪ or C'est à qui… *(ce livre/ cette cassette)?

- And of course you can answer with "c'est à moi", or by using a POSSESSIVE PRONOUN. The pronoun will of course agree with the thing owned, not the owner:

▪	le mien	la mienne	les miens	les miennes	MINE
▪	le tien	la tienne	les tiens	les tiennes	YOURS
▪	le sien	la sienne	les siens	les siennes	HIS/HERS
▪	le nôtre	la nôtre	les nôtres	les nôtres	OURS
▪	le vôtre	la vôtre	les vôtres	les vôtres	YOURS
▪	le leur	la leur	les leurs	les leurs	THEIRS

- Note the accent over the NOUS and VOUS forms – it affects pronunciation.

▪ C'est à qui cette chaise? Elle est à moi. C'est la mienne.
À qui sont ces livres? Ils sont à nous. Ce sont les nôtres.
Mon stylo ne marche plus - je peux utiliser le tien, s'il te plaît?
David a de la chance - ma grand-mère est morte, mais la sienne est vivante.

The conditional tense

- The conditional tense is used to describe:
  - What you would be doing (I would be eating)
  - What you would do (I would eat)

- To form the conditional tense, simply:
  - Take the infinitive (removing the final E of –RE verbs) manger, finir, vendr~~e~~
  - Add the correct personal ending:

    je PARLER – ais
    tu FINIR – ais
    il/elle VENDR – ait
    nous RÉUSSIR – ions
    vous RENCONTRER – iez
    ils RENDR – aient

- This tense is a mixture of the FUTURE and the IMPERFECT TENSE. The stems are the same as for the future and the endings are the same as for the imperfect. Revise the irregular future stems from E Mich 3: they are not repeated here.

Some spelling changes in the conditional tense

- The spelling changes for the future tense (E Mich 3) also affect verbs in the conditional tense. (j'achèterais, nous achèterions, j'essuierais, nous essuierions)

A second "if…" clause

- You learned a 1st "si clause" in E Mich 5. This is the second one, and is extremely useful for saying "what would happen if something else happened":

  - Si + imperfect + conditional (or conditional + si + imperfect)
  - Si j'étais riche, j'achèterais une nouvelle voiture.
    Je ferais plus d'exercice si j'avais plus de temps
    Si elle m'invitait au restaurant, j'accepterais volontiers.
