Disjunctive object pronouns: "them and me"

- In F Lent 5 and 7 you learned about DIRECT OBJECT PRONOUNS and INDIRECT OBJECT PRONOUNS. You learned where to put them, and that DIRECT OBJECT pronouns were used to refer to people and things for verbs that involve no preposition. INDIRECT OBJECT PRONOUNS were used to refer to people (not things) for NON-REFLEXIVE verbs involving the preposition à. Look back if you need to.

- DISJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS are very different. Here they are:

  - moi, toi, lui/elle, nous, vous, eux/elles

- They are used to refer to people only. They are used with all verbs except those mentioned above in the first bullet point. In other words, they are used:

  - to refer to people with all verbs using "de"
    se moquer de, s'occuper de, se souvenir de, s'approcher de, se servir de rire de, rêver de, avoir pitié de, se méfier de
  - to refer to people with all REFLEXIVE verbs using "à".
    se fier à, s'adresser à, s'intéresser à, s'en remettre à, s'en prendre à

- They do NOT GO before the conjugated verb like the other object pronouns. They go after the preposition that has caused them to be used:

  - j'ai peur d'eux. Nous avons pitié de toi. Tu te souviens de moi?
    Il rêve d'elle. Je m'adresse à vous. Méfie-toi d'elles!

- Disjunctive pronouns are only used for PEOPLE. For things, "EN" is used for verbs using DE and "Y" is used for verbs using À. These two pronouns go in the same place as INDIRECT OBJECT PRONOUNS, ie before the conjugated verb:

  - j'en ai peur tu t'en souviens? J'en rêve!
    il va s'en occuper elle s'y intéresse Il s'en est approché

- Another use of DISJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS is to refer to people after any other prepostion, and also can be used on their own in exclamations:

  - chez moi, chez eux un cadeau pour moi ou pour lui?
    avec qui? lui? Qui a triché? Eux!

The imperative: "do this! don't do that!"

- If you want to tell someone what to do or what not to do, you will need the imperative. The imperative form of the verb only really exists in two persons, "tu" and "vous". It is used in the "nous" form as a way of making suggestions.

- To form the imperative:

  - Take the "tu" form of the present tense (losing the –s of any –es ending) (parle~~s~~, couvre~~s~~, regarde~~s~~, mange~~s~~, finis, choisis)

  - (Or alternatively take the vous form and leave as it is)
  - (parlez, couvrez, regardez, mangez, finissez, choisissez)

  - mange ce gâteau! regarde cette photo! choisis un film!
    parlez avec moi! fermez la fenêtre! finissez votre travail!

- Some irregular forms:

  - ALLER: va! allez! Va avec lui!
  - ÊTRE: sois! soyez! Sois raisonnable!
  - AVOIR: aie! ayez! Aie peur! Aie très peur!
  - SAVOIR: sache! sachez! Sache que c'est vrai!
  - VOULOIR: - veuillez! Veuillez me suivre!

- Using pronouns with imperatives can seem a little tricky. First you need to differentiate between POSITIVE IMPERATIVES (do this!) and NEGATIVE IMPERATIVES (don't do this!). NEGATIVE IMPERATIVES are the easiest as everything is exactly as you would expect. Pronouns are the same, and go in the same place as you would expect:

  - ne me regarde pas! ne le leur donne pas! ne lui parle jamais! ne te lève pas!

- POSITIVE IMPERATIVES are harder. Firstly, DIRECT AND INDIRECT PRONOUNS "me" and "te" mutate and become "MOI" and "TOI". Secondly, DIRECT and INDIRECT OBJECT PRONOUNS get joined on to the end of the verb by hyphens. And the order of pronouns? DIRECT then INDIRECT.

  - regarde-moi! donne-le-leur! parle-lui!
    donne-le-moi! lève-toi! réveille-toi!

- Remember: BUSINESS AS USUAL for pronouns in NEGATIVE IMPERATIVES
